We are looking for 15 participants to complete a longitudinal study on academic stress and cognition. Participants will need to return for three time points (see dates above) to complete a cognitive computer task. The next day, participants will complete an at-home salivary kit to assess stress levels. By participating in all three time points, you will aid in our understanding of how end-of-semester stress impacts cognition. Please reach out soon, since the slots will fill up fast.
